Reflective Writing

Read the example of reflective writing in the box. Then write a paragraph in the spaces below. Use correct sentence structure.

Some of the experiments we do in chemistry produce amazing colours, some explode and some bubble but some can be disappointing. Flame tests are great when you can make green flames from the copper salts and purple ones from the potassium salts. When you add acid to some metals, it bubbles and you can light it up. Although the teacher reckons that we are not permitted to perform any really dangerous experiments, anything in chemistry is great as long as there's a Bunsen burner going.
